Unsourced material may be challenged and removed.Sold alongside the GMC Safari, the Astro was marketed in multiple configurations, including passenger minivan and cargo van.For its entire production, the Astro and Safari were produced by Baltimore Assembly in Baltimore, Maryland; the vans would be the final model line produced by the facility. In total, approximately 3.2 million Astros and Safaris were produced from 1985 to 2005.While marketed as a response to the firstgeneration Chrysler minivans, GM adapted a rearwheel drive layout, sizing the Astro and Safari closely to the shortwheelbase Chevrolet G10 van. Similar to the Ford Aerostar, to reduce production costs, GM adapted lighttruck powertrain components; engines and transmissions were sourced from the Chevrolet S10, allowing for a towing capacity of up to 5,500 lb 2,500 kg. GMC sourced the Safari nameplate from Pontiac used by the latter to denote woodgrained station wagons.The van can have a seating configuration between two and eight passengers. The 4cylinder engine was only offered in cargo versions of the Astro; it was dropped after 1990. For 1985, the 4.3lV6 RPO LB1 used a 4 barrel carburetor. For 1986 throttle body fuel injection TBI was used. For 1992 and later years, central port injection was used. For the Mvan, the front suspension shares most components with the GM Bbody station wagon Chevrolet Caprice, Oldsmobile Custom Cruiser and larger variants of the Pontiac Safari and Buick Estate Wagon with a leafspring rear suspension.

The lower ball joints were larger than their Bbody counterparts similar to 197796 Cadillac D platform vehicles, e.g., Fleetwood limousines. These ball joints were later used in the final Chevrolet Caprice 9C1 police package cars manufactured in 1995 and 1996.The AWD models had a lower fuel economy 17 miles per gallon highway versus 20 to 21 miles per gallon for rearwheel drive vans. AWD Astros used a Borg Warner 4472 transfer case.This form was two biparting doors with a flipup window above. Previously, Astro and Safari vans were equipped only with biparting doors. An optional 4.3 L RPO L35 engine with central port injection and a balance shaft was phased in.As with many other 1993 model year GM vehicles, Scotchgard fabric protection also became a standard feature on Astro vans equipped with cloth seats. 1994 also saw the addition of three new exterior paint colors.Also for 1995, the shorter length body was dropped. In 1996, a redesigned dash received a passenger side airbag. The vans remained mostly unchanged until the end of production in 2005.In side impacts, the Astro and Safari both received the highest, five star rating in every year that the test was administered.Retrieved February 28, 2016.
