It is the first of several screenwriter Richard Curtis to present Hugh Grant, and follows the adventures of Charles (Grant) and his friends circle through various social occasions, for each one finds the novel. Andie MacDowell Stars As Charles Carrie's love interest with Kristin Scott Thomas, James Fleet, Simon Callow, John Hannah, Charlotte Coleman, David Bower, Corin Redgrave and Rowan Atkinson in support papers. The film was done in six weeks, it cost the £ 3 million, [1] and became an unexpected success and the british british film of the history in the time, with the total number of world-box office of $ 245 , 7 million and reception of the Academy's own names for best photo and best original script. In addition, Grant won the Golden Globe Award for the best actor - image of musical movement or coma either BAFTA for the best actor in a leading role, and the film won the best BAFTA movie, The best direction best actress on a supporting role for Scott Thomas. The success of the film drove Hugh award to international Stardom, particularly in the United States. [3] In 1999, four weddings and a funeral placed on the 23rd in the 100 largest British films of the British Institute of the XX Século. In 2016, Empire magazine ranked 21 on the list of the 100 Best British movies. [4] a 2017 survey of 150 actors, directors, writers, producers and chromic by Time Out magazine ranked the 74 Best British film of all time. [5] Curtis brought together director Newell and the surviving cast for a 25th anniversary short-term alleviation meeting a red nose day and a wedding, which aired in the UK during the red nose in 15 From March 2019. [6] Plot in the wedding of Angus and Laura in Somerset, the best single man Charles, his scarlett of airline colleague; Your friend Fiona and her brother Tom; Gareth, a gay man and his mistress Matthew scotch; And the deaf brother of Charles David endured the festivities. At the reception, Charles becomes wounded with Caroline (Carrie), a beautiful young American, and the two spend the night together. In the morning, Carrie demands that Charles owns her, noting that they may have "lost a great opportunity," and then leaves to the United States. Three months later, at the wedding of Bernard and Lydia in London, who was sexually involved in the previous wedding, Charles finds Carrie again, which is now accompanied by his Scottish FiancÃ © Hamish. Charles faces more humiliation of several ex-girlfriends, including Henrietta disturbance, and retreats to an empty hotel's sweater, where Carrie and Hamish departs. He gets stuck in the room when the settlers â € â € â € â € tripping to have sex. Later, he is confronted by an angry Henrietta about his "serial monogamy" host and fear of letting anyone stay very close to it. Carrie reappears, and she and Charles spend another night together. A month later, Charles receives an invitation to Carrie's wedding. When buying a gift, it runs to Carrie and Selecting a wedding dress. It reports its 33 sexual partners; Charles, who ends up having been the number 32, would soon confess his love to her, but it is One more month later, Charles and his friends watching Carrie's wedding in Scotch. Gareth Gregario instructs the group to look for potential partners; Scarlett hit him with a named American chester. Like Charles Clouds Carrie and Hamish Dance, Fiona deduces her disgust. When Charles asks Fiona why she is single, she confesses that she loved Charles as long as she met for the first time; Although she solidly with her feelings, Charles did not return to them. During the groom's toast, Gareth suddenly dies from a heart attack. At the funeral of Gareth, Matthew recites the "funeral blue" poem of the English poet W. H. Auden, celebrating his relationship with Gareth and calling Auden "Another splendid pederass." After Carrie and Charles sharing a brief moment, and Charles and Tom reflect on the fact that, despite the pride of his clique in being single, Gareth and Matthew were a couple "get married" all the time, and if the "true Love "is fan. Ten months later, Charles's day's wedding day arrives; The bride turns out to be Henrietta. Shortly before the wedding ceremony, Carrie arrives and tells Charles she and Hamish parted. Charles has a crisis of confidence and is advised by David and Matthew, but proceeds with the wedding. When the vigor asks for no reason why the couple should not marry, however, the deaf david says in language of signs that he suspects that the groom loves someone, what confirms Charles. Henrietta anger gives you a punch, and the wedding is interrupted. Carrie tries to apologize to Charles, who confesses that at the altar, he realized that she was the only person he really loved. Charles, who fears marriage, proposes a lifelong commitment to Carrie's wedding, and she accepts. At the end of the film, Henrietta marries a guardian officer Grenadier; David marries his Serena girlfriend, whom he met in the second marriage; Scarlett gets home chester; Tom marry Deirdre, a distant cousin he met at Charles's wedding; Matthew finds a new male partner; Fiona is shown in an image with prince Charles; And Charles and Carrie have a baby. As Charles Andie Macdowell as Carrie James Fleet as Tom Simon Callow as Gareth John Hannah as Matthew Kristin Scott Thomas as Fiona David Bower as David Charlotte Coleman as Scarlett Timothy Walker as Angus Sara Crowe as Laura Rowan Atkinson as father Gerald David Haig Bernard Delaney Sophie Thompson as Lydia Hibbot Corin Redgrave as Hamish Banks Anna Chancellor as Henrietta Rupert Vansittart as its own experiences of George writing writing Richard Curtis as a wedding participant inspired the premise for four weddings and a funeral. [7] According to Curtis he began to write the script at 34, after realizing that he had attended 65 marriages in an 11-year period. In a marriage, he was approached by a concidential, but he turned her down and always regretted; Consequently he based the origin of Charles and Carrie's novel in that situation. [7] LED Curtis 17 drafts to reach the final version. He commented on the influence of director Mike Newell; "I come from a school where it becomes funny is what matters. Mike was obsessed with keeping it real. Every character, does not matter how small, has a story, not just three lines Funny. It is a romantic movie about love and friendship that nothing in a sea of jokes. " [8] Curtis chose to omit any character of characters, because he did not think a group of friends who realistically discuss their jobs, while together at a wedding. [7] Curtis, Newell and producers began the process of foundation of four marriages at the beginning of 1992, and continued to listen to actors, even after financing fell completely in mid-1992. About 70 actors test for paper Charles before Hugh Grant did. [3] Hugh Grant was ready to give up acting as a career when he received the route of four weddings and a funeral; He said in 2016 that: "I really was not getting any kind of work, and then my mine Surprise this script came through my agent's mailbox, and it was very good. And I called and said there must be a mistake, you sent me a good script. "[9] Initially, writer Richard Curtis, who modeled Charles's charter afterwards, opposed to the paper. He thought he was very handsome. He was eventually persuaded by Mike Newell and the producers of the The original choice for Carrie's paper was Jeanne Tripplehorn, but she had to give up because of a death in her family. [10] Marisa I took and , supposedly, Sarah Jessica Parker, were also considered before Andie MacDowell. [7] MacDowell took a cut of 75% at his fee to appear, receiving $ 250,000 early, but due to the success of the film, she won fence. of $ 3 million. [11] Grant's participation reached another obstacle when his agent requested an increase in £ 5,000 on the £ 35,000 wage concession was offered. Producers initially refused due to extremely tight budget, but eventually agreed. The members of the support cast W 17,500 d £ 17,500 each. [Citation I needed] Production Duncan Kenworthy produced the film while you are saby of Jim Henson's Productions. [11] PRÃ © -production for the film was a long process because the funding was erratic, falling in mid-1992 and leading to a lot of uncertainty. [3] Finally at the beginning of 1993, work work films entered to close the gap. However, another $ 1.2 million were cut just before the production started in the summer of 1993, forcing the film to be done in just 36 days with a final budget of £ 2.7 million (approval of US $ 4.4 million in 1994). [3] Channel four films contributed £ 800,000. [11] The budget was so tight that the extras had to use their own wedding clothes, while Rowan Atkinson was maintained as the vigil for two weddings, so that the production does not He would have to pay another actor. [7] Future Home Secretary and Member of Parliament (MP) Amber Rudd received the criterion of "Aristocracy Coordinator" after she organized several aristocrats to make apparitions not credited as wedding extras, Including the Pilgrim Cavendish, which was at the time of Hartington Marques, and the Count of Woolton, who conveniently wore his own morning suits. [7] To make grant look more nerd, producers stylized it with shaggy hair, cups and deliberately clumsy and barely adjusted clothing. [12] [13] The subsidence was encouraged by Director Mike Newell to disrupt and stumble in his lines, written in "Convolutionary Syntax" as Grant describes them in order to give Charles a nervous quality. [13] Grant, who fought with hay fever over filming, was not insecure from Newell's direction and his own performance, which he thought "Atroz"; In Newell, he commented that: "He seemed to be giving direction against what I thought was the natural beats of the coma. He was making a movie with texture, landing her, touching the truths instead of the gags ". [8] The film was shot mainly in London and home counties, including Hampstead, Islington, where the final moments happen at Highbury Terrace, Greenwich Hospital, Betchworth in Surrey, Amersham, in Buckinghamshire, St Bartholomew-The-Great (Number Wedding) and West Thurrock in Essex. [14] Outdoor shots of guests arriving for the funeral were filmed in Thurrock, Essex overlooking the River Thames with the Dartford River crossing and imposing houses in Bedfordshire (Luton Hoo for reception of the wedding of two years) and hampshire. [15] Production according to Hugh Grant, the initial screening of a four weddings cut was very bad. "I thought we had spoiled. When we went to watch a stupid cut, all us, I, Richard Curtis, Mike Newell, the producers, everyone thought this The worst movie that was already perpetrated. Let's go and emigrate to Peru when you leave so no one can meet us. And then they had one, some cuts then they took to Santa Monica for a test screening and all all this. And it was a big surprise.
