In our house, let's say the word D. Well, in reality we say a couple of words D. Dead. Died. Dying. Death. Although our daughter is three and there is a pretty death temptation, we have chosen to be simple. Maybe you ask you how often we use these words D. Well, we use them a lot. That's because our other daughter died. It's dead. And it's not just my husband and I use these words. Our daughter does it too. "I wish my sister, Dorothy, didn't die." "My sister is dead." "Is she,~" they will get like my sister? "Is it,~" "Is it strange to think about Treenne who uses these words so the question of fact? Once upon a time, I would have thought it was morbid. I would have questioned because any son would have need to talk about death. But, then our other daughter is dead. He was dead. And when he died, death has become a very big part of our life. Because Dorothy is a very large part of our life And she happened to die. So even if she died in front of her sister, let's talk about her. We've always talked about Dorothy and as soon as Frances asked us where she was honest. And it makes the French frances that her. sister died, but they don't stop talking about Dorothy. Death is not a reason to stop talking about someone. We simply made the part of the death of the conversation. Why do you talk about her, let's talk about the fact that He doesn't live in our house because he died. We stitch with the Our Dorothy Bear and let's talk about how much we love sister and the way we wish we hadn't died. How much we would like you to be here with us. We stop to admire the photo of her as we go upstairs in bed and say the name of her. Sometimes we see a letter D and we connect to the name of Dorothy. It was my husband and I who would start these conversations, but over time is Frances who wants to talk about her sister. She made me really sad, but now I usually smile when we talk about her. Even when we talk about how she died. It seemed a little embarrassing having these conversations with a person so small. But, over time, it only looks like a regular conversation. Because in this house we use the words D. We use these words because the concept of death is scary and uncertain and sad. It seems like the kind of thing you may not want to speak. But this is exactly why we do it. Because when we ignore death, we ignore a very full part of life. Every living thing dies. It is inevitable. When we talk about death, we also have the opportunity to talk about life. When we talk about how Dorothy died, we also come to talk about how she lived. We receive to share her stories of her life of her in Mama's belly and what she was like her when she was born. We talk about talking about how we chose her name and look at her photo. We receive to share the Keepsakes who have been handed down from one sister to another and those who are safely preserved in the Dorothy special box. So, in this house, we use the words D. Dead. Died. Dying. Death. And we use these words, so we can also talk about life and memories and love.
