Perfect for a preschool name tracing worksheet and name learning activity with alternative font choices make this name tracing generator & printable easy to make and use! My 5-year-old is finally showing interest in writing letters and boy oh boy is that learning accelerating! He seems to be a bit hung up on writing his name though and I think it might be the R and e that are proving difficult for him. So I came up with this lovely printable. Then I thought, you know what, I bet other kids have a problem writing letters, too. I then told my husband and he made me this nifty little code for my blog so that my readers could also get this printable totally personalized. OK, so let's get started. Name Tracing Worksheet Printable name tracing worksheet is great for your child learning those letters to help my little guy out, so keep an eye for those. I printed out a page for each of my 3 kids. I love these learning resources pockets to use dry erase pens on. The kids write and remove as many times as their focus allows. My 5-year-old did his name 6 times before interest was lost for this session. My 2-and-a-half-year-old tired once and decided that drawing and erasing was simply better. You can of course just print them and use them without using a cover. These are also great in a classroom setting as the letters are the perfect size for preschoolers! I use these plastic pockets for a wide variety of name tracing printables from mazes to line tracing. Good stuff right!? The dry erase pen is just the same one we use for the whiteboard. I have thinner pens on order for a better grip. I recommend these. Free printable name tracing worksheet Now the fun bit!
